

Guiding your org to operational excellence

Operational Management

- Management competence review
- Operations metrics
- Lean processes
- Process updating

Process Management

- Business process
- Auditing
- Redesign
- Cost reduction
- Simplification

An Osborne interim executive will add value to your organization in the following ways:

n Operational management: Comprehensive review of individual managerial competences. Key, objective, third party insight into underutilized competencies and skills gaps. Critical evaluation of individual performance to enhance sustainable results.

n Process management: We will compare your business' processes to industry best

Operations Management Training

- Internal training resource needs
- External resource identification
- Core skills needs

Ensuring and maintaining operational excellence

- Quality & motivation

Human Resources

- Resource Allocation
- · Talent sourcing

- Quantity practices learned through years of experience. Training
 - Aimed at reducing or eliminating non-value added process steps to improve and simplify
 - informational inputs to processes.

Supply Chain Management

- Best practices
- Staff competency
- Performance metrics
- n Human resources: Put in place stronger talent acquisition practices and measures to ensure management maximizes business performance and design structures and metrics which provide continuous, timely feedback on individual effort and results.
- n Supply chain management: An enterprise's supply chain often determines the quality, cost and timeliness of customer order fulfilment. The consultant will review, recommend and implement critical improvements to the supply chain structure and supplier management practices.
- Internal/external strategy: Analyze both these factors and identify strategic options to best use valuable capital and time resources. When necessary the Osborne Principal can develop and implement plans and actions to achieve each strategic thrust.
- n Operations management training: implement individual improvement objectives with reporting timelines to track gap reduction and closure. This ensures "gaps" aren't ignored (everyone's too busy) which prolongs the absence of critical, performance enabling skills.
